Linguistic Landscapes: Using Signs and Symbols to Translate Cities

June 30 - July 4, 2025

This course focuses on the growing interdisciplinary field of Linguistic Landscapes (LL), which traditionally analyses “language of public road signs, advertising billboards, street names, place names, commercial shop signs, and public signs on government buildings”, usually as they occur in urban spaces (Landry and Bourhis, 1997; Shohamy and Gorter, 2009). More recently, LL research has evolved beyond studying only verbal signs into the realm of semiotics (Shohamy 2018; Gorter 2018; Danesi & Santeramo 2020), thus extending the analytical scope into the multimodal domain of images, sounds, drawings, movements, visuals, graffiti, tattoos, colours, smells as well as people. This has led to a broader definition of LLs as “Interaction of discursive modalities with visual images, nonverbal communication, architecture and the built environment” (Jaworski & Thurlow 2010: 2). Students will be informed about multiple aspects of modern LL research including an overview of different types of signs, their formal features as well as their functions (Auer 2010; Gorter 2018).

Who is it for?

Applications are welcome from current final year Undergraduates (finalists, BA3), MA and MPhil/PhD Students in Linguistics, Sociology, Classical Studies, (Business) Communication Studies, History, Cultural Studies, Political Studies, Translation Studies or any other related discipline.

Methodology and structure

Participants will be presented a preliminary assignment including introductory reading along with documenting (three pictures) the linguistic landscape of their home town. At the course, each day will begin with one or two interactive lectures from different disciplinary and thematic perspectives. Theoretical views and topics will be empirically elaborated and tested in daily breakout and discussion sessions as well as in a guided visit to Venice. In order to optimally explore the linguistic landscape of the city, participants will be divided into groups, each of which will be assigned and explore a different part of Venice. The course will culminate in a presentation and discussion of each group's observations about the linguistic landscape(s) of Venice. Throughout the course, all groups participate in a collective online blog post thus reflecting the empirical progress of their project.

Learning outcomes for participants

This Summer School aims

- to familiarize students with the standard tools and concepts required for collecting, annotating and analyzing data in Linguistic Landscapes research;
- to make students familiar with the latest LL scholarship;
- to enable students to carry out and present LL research in situ in Venice;
- to make students aware of social, economic and political issues such as diversity, racism and discrimination, in- and exclusion, activism and glocal controversies, ideologies and justice, sexual identity, gender equality, etc.;
- to introduce students to discourses and research on LL impacting the cultural profile of our cities (and Venice in particular) and affecting the way we interact with the urban environment
- to enable students to apply interdisciplinary LL approaches.
