Films in Venice and Filming Venice

August 26 - September 4, 2024

Venice International University
Isola di San Servolo, Venice
Course description
The aim is to combine film analysis, theory and practice, applying them to representations of Venice, through a multidisciplinary and multicultural approach, reflected both in the composition of the faculty and the student body.
In one part of the program, students will be introduced to the history, culture, and anthropology of Venice and their relation to visual media. They will be offered basic notions of film analysis and film-making theory. The other part will be devoted to film-making practice.

Students will be encouraged to develop a team project on Venice, taking inspiration from selected movie scenes and locations, their toponyms and social character, adopting a “complex narrative” when writing the script: a film, which will be screened and collectively discussed and analyzed at the end of the Summer School. Deserving projects, if any, will be shown at the Ca’ Foscari Short Film Festival in 2025.

Providing critical tools for understanding and creating visual moving images is necessary today. We live in a society where the eye prevails among the senses; where everybody has at hand (and at more accessible prices) sophisticated ready and easy to use instruments for producing and consuming videos: tablets, smartphones and recently even virtual reality equipment. There is a trend in film making to mix genres and a growing interest in Visual Anthropology and the relationship between cinema and locations, which makes it interesting to offer a multidisciplinary and multicultural experience in an over represented and historical place such as Venice.

Venice is a literary and visual arts palimpsest and a study laboratory in contemporary social and environmental conflicts and contradictions. The presence of the Film Festival provides further opportunities for discussion and inspiration. VIU is the ideal place for multicultural and multidisciplinary activities.

Learning outcomes
Developing knowledge of the theoretical and analytical aspects of cinema and on the challenges of visual representation of recognizable places; achieving an understanding of problems and potentials entailed with the Venetian setting; acquiring or improving skills in filmmaking and working in a team; storytelling, also as a complement to written scholarship.

Who is it for?
Graduate and undergraduate students from various disciplines: film studies, film-making, art history, visual art, history, cultural anthropology, sociology; and anyone who would like to learn the basics of film-making in various forms – fiction, docudrama, documentary, visual arts, etc.
